The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Recent years have seen the modification of milk into several different forms, including condensed milk, evaporated milk, acidophilous milk, dried powdered, skimmed, and irradiated milk, and many milk products, well.

Differences, more or less slight, exist among these milk substances. Generally, the basic value of the milk remains.

But those forms of milk that have to be heated down to the desired consistency have been found weaker in one or two of their vitamins. And the milk products have been found to vary in proteins, fats, and carbohydrates, as well as the number of calories that they provide.

In ordinary industry, condensed milk means a product which has been heated down to a thicker substance, and canned. In this case a low temperature is used and sugar is added to aid preservation.

Today's Health Question

Q.—An X-ray of my daughter's teeth shows that she has several which should be extracted, but she has a horror of losing any of them. She says they do not hurt, so why have them extracted?

A.—Infected teeth are a source of danger to your daughter's health, since the infected material may be carried by the blood to the joints, to the heart, to the nervous system, or to various other organs of the body, and there set up a secondary infection. If definite evidence of infection of the teeth is found, a competent dentist will tell you whether it is possible to clear up the infection, or whether the teeth should be removed. Your daughter would do well to follow such advice.

Evaporated milk is condensed and canned without the addition of sugar. Therefore, much more heat is applied to aid preservation.

Such milk may be heated almost to the boiling point for from 30 to 60 minutes. As a result, it has a little more cooked taste than has condensed milk. Fluid usually is added before it is used.

Apparent heating does not do much toward diminishing vitamins A and G (B-2), but it does seriously reduce the amount of vitamins B-1 and C in the milk.

Dried milk and powdered milk usually are prepared by various processes, such as spraying partially evaporated milk into warm, dry chambers, or spraying milk on heated rollers.

Skimmed milk is that from which the cream has been removed, either by gravity or by centrifugal force.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Paul de Kruif has written many books about the great miracles of medical science; but never has he written as honestly, as wisely, or as significantly as in his newest book, "Why Keep Them Alive?"

His earlier books were fine examples of vivid reporting. This book is alive with the cold fury of a man who has looked upon wrong and who cannot be still until the wrong is set right.

What, asks Mr. de Kruif, is the use of having scientists find new ways to defeat death—when poverty forces people to go on dying in the same old ways? Why find ways to conquer diphtheria, tuberculosis, meningitis, or rheumatic heart disease, when thousands of children will go on dying of those dreadful maladies each year because their parents cannot afford to have them cared for?

Why trouble to learn about vitamins, calories, and balanced diets when millions of children must continue to go underfed? Why, in short, measure the amount of good that our medical miracle-workers can do by the amount that can be paid for? Why make science the meek handmaiden of money? Why go hungry, sick, and cold when we might be fed, well, and warm?

Mr. de Kruif arranges his facts pitilessly and hammers them home with inexorable logic. And he caps his story by telling of the medical miracle which brought the Dionne quintuplets through the pangs of those first months. The science that saved them, he says, should be the birthright of every American baby. It is available—but only (in ordinary cases) to those who can afford it.

It is a fine, indignant, and intelligent book that Mr. de Kruif has written. It is offered by Harcourt, Brace and Co. for $3.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

If you have read "Anthony Adverse" and the newer "The Last Pilgrim" by George Santayana, both studies in human nature, I wonder if you have been able to make comparisons between the two boys, the protagonists of each book.

Anthony was, at least to me, pure extrovert, taking his world as it came and making the best of it. And Oliver Alden, scion of Puritan stock, lonely in his babyhood as was Anthony, was an introvert of the first water. Oliver was lonely but not alone. He did not play with shadows, literally I mean, but instead was carefully moulded by nurse, governess, mother and family traditions to the extent of avoiding life as it really was. Conflicts and unhappiness resulted.

Anthony took his experience as he found them. He was of the world, but Oliver was not. He had only one world, the one that was in himself. He was perennially melancholy, without ability to recognize happiness when he found it.

Real Children the Same

Let us leave the boys here and observe our own children. All children seem to be born to some particular pattern of their own. Two parents may produce a dozen, no two of which resemble each other in trait or social attitude. This is explained by the biologists. Such is explained by the biologists. Such children may converge more to a central pattern, because family life and experience leave their mark. When all have the identical home-life in early and formative years, it is natural that their personal pattern undergo a change. Members of a family are "tarnished with the same stick," in manner, speech, and thought, and to all outward appearance bear the mark of the clan.

Where there is one child, the original pattern is likely to remain. Plus the influence of his elders and his training. There is no "family life" to slur the pattern. Both Anthony and Oliver were "pure" patterns.

It is better then, I think, for an only-child to have company, particularly if he is of the introvert type, inclined to draw too far into a world of his own. Grow-ups are too far away from the child's own interpretations to have much effect. They may do all the wise things the books say and lead him as they think best toward all the higher thoughts and sets of life, and yet may leave the real child untouched.

Extrovert Also Faces Peril
Even the extrovert, one who seldom dreams or analyses things too much, needs the touch of other children. He begins to have so much faith in himself and his ability to overcome all obstacles, that he goes to pieces when confronted by that which he cannot change. He needs, as well as the sensitive child, the roughage, the give-and-take and the general group experiences that are good for all of us. And he needs a few inhibitions.

The serious child has too many as a rule. He is overly conscientious. He also becomes bigoted in his way. He is eaten up with conflicts, and finally seeks seclusion preferable to people. These are but a few of the reasons why children need other children to round them out and prepare them for normal, healthy attitudes toward existence.

Speaking of Prohibitions—

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD—Unusual qualifications are required for some of the top-notch jobs in Hollywood, and showmanship isn't always one of them.

For example, if you had a studio location department to be bossed, you could do a lot worse than hire a former Secret Service man with a photographic eye, a tough exterior, a political affability, and a great many prominent acquaintances.

That just about describes William Guthrie, who works for Warner Brothers and is the most colorful of all studio location directors. His task is to make available for movie purposes anything from a squadron of U. S. submarines to a natural local counterpart of the Khyber Pass, a million-dollar rose garden or a cell-block in a penitentiary.

Human Beaulaker
Sixteen years in the U. S. Secret Service gave him a lot of valuable training. That and the fact that he has traveled all his life. His faculties of observation now are directed mostly on scenery. After 14 years in his present job, he is personally acquainted with almost every square yard of California; at least, he certainly knows more about it than any other person.

Guthrie subscribes to travel magazines and keeps himself in trim by looking at such pictures and making mental note of where in California each bit of scenery could be duplicated. He hasn't been stuck yet.

Looking for a Valley
His greatest worry at the moment is finding a place similar to the "valley of death" across which the Light Brigade charged in 1853. That picture, based on Tennyson's poem, is scheduled for production next month. Errol Flynn will be in it, and "The Charge of the Light Brigade," with nearly 4000 extras in the battle scenes, ought to be a high point in Hollywood's current craze for militaristic goings-on.

Finding a "valley of death" would be no trick at all if newspaper photographers had covered the Crimean war. But all that's available is some military data, including old maps and hazy sketches. Guthrie has done a lot of researching and has two or three suitable spots in mind.

Scenery Scout
In his spare time, the location director goes motoring with a photographer, selecting all sorts of miscellaneous scenery. Thousands of such pictures are filed in his office.

Besides unusual locations, he also goes after unusual properties, such as a French locomotive of 1850, or a sailing ship of that period—these for the Florence Nightingale picture. He has pictures and descriptions of practically all vessels afloat in the Pacific, together with prices.

Rental of a liner may amount to $3000 a day. Large yachts ordinarily might bring $500 a day, but Guthrie has several friends who'll lend theirs for less.

Battleships come cheaper because Guthrie has friends in the navy. Also in the army. He can produce a fleet of fighting planes with a telegram or two and a telephone call.

His Orders Go
Guthrie not only selects picture spots, but is the boss when a company goes on location. Transportation, housing, feeding, and discipline are his responsibilities. In the old days, he says, he used to have to send a lot of people home because they thought location trips were convivial outings.

Once he hired a sheriff and an army of deputies to raid every joint in a booming border town. His players were weeded out and dismissed with a good dressing-down.

By this time all Hollywoodsmen know that Guthrie won't stand for any monkey business, and the after-hours conduct of players on location is marked by all the debauchery of a deacons' picnic.

Twin Marmosets Born
SANTA CRUZ, Calif.—(AP)—Twin babies weighing less than a pound each were born to two marmosets from Ecuador owned by J. P. Walker here. It is rare for marmosets to give birth in this country, Walker said.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

TOBY RYAN, 19, works behind the jewelry counter of a large Manhattan department store. She poses for a photograph to be used in a store advertisement.

MARTY HIATT, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face."

Toby goes to dinner with BILL BRANDT, who works in an advertising agency.

A few days later Toby loses her job, due to the scheduling of jealous MAURINE BALL, also employed in the jewelry department.

Toby's efforts to find another job are fruitless. Then she meets MARTY HIATT again. He sends her to NEY BLAKE, manager of a model agency. Blake tells her she must have photographs and arrange with Hiatt to take the pictures.

Toby goes to Hiatt's studio. Standing before the camera, she sees a young man watching from the doorway.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX

BILL BRANDT halted in the doorway, glancing at Toby. He did not speak, but one hand went up in a quick, gay salute. Toby smiled back. And all at once she forgot the heat and lights and her panic of a moment before. Toby was herself again, smiling and confident.

Hiatt's gaze followed Toby's to the door. He said, rather testily, "Well—?"

Bill came forward. "Are you Mr. Hiatt?" he asked. "I'm from Amberson & Blane's office. Brandt's my name. Charlie Leslie asked me to bring this over to you." He held out an envelope.

Hiatt took the envelope, drew out some folded sheets and glanced at them quickly. Then he slid them back into the envelope and dropped it on a chair. "All right," he said. "Thanks."

He looked at Bill a moment. Then he said, "You and my model seem to know each other."

Bill smiled. "We're old friends."

"Oh, is that so?" Hiatt's tone was neither friendly or unfriendly. He looked at Toby.

She was still smiling. She said, "Bill—I couldn't believe it was you for a moment. I was never more surprised in my life—"

"I was surprised, too," Bill told her. "What's this all about any more? What are you doing here?"

Toby had turned slightly. From the platform she looked down at Bill, her eyes shining and eager. The lights played on her hair, transforming it into a glistening halo. The pose she had taken in consciously was easy and graceful.

Bill said, "Gosh, Toby, you look like a million dollars—"

There was a sudden "click" and both Toby and Bill turned. "Oh!" Toby exclaimed, "did you take the picture?"

"One of them," Hiatt told her. "Didn't know I was taking it, did you?" He smiled, pleased with himself. "That's all right. Like to take 'em that way sometimes. Stay where you are—I want to make a few more shots—"

Bill interrupted. "Mr. Hiatt, do you mind if I stay for a while?"

"Well, ordinarily I don't like strangers around the studio when I'm working. But, this once, I guess it's all right."

"Thanks. I'll promise to stay out of your way."

Hiatt and his assistant began moving lights, changing the angle of the camera. Bill moved nearer to Toby. "Say," he said, "I want to know all about this. Are you working for Hiatt? Going to be a model?"

She nodded. "I'm working for him," she said, "but it's a long story. I'll tell you all about it when I'm through."

The photographer swung around. "Don't move," he told the girl. "I want you to stand there, just as you are. Going to see if I can't get a little more light on your hair—"

Bill smiled. "We're old friends."

"Oh, is that so?" Hiatt's tone was neither friendly or unfriendly. He looked at Toby.

She was still smiling. She said, "Bill—I couldn't believe it was you for a moment. I was never more surprised in my life—"

"Yes, I'm ready."

Hiatt came up beside them. "You understand about the pictures, don't you, Miss Ryan? I'll send them over to Blake as soon as they're finished. He'll get in touch with you after he's seen them."

"Yes, I understand," Toby told him. "Oh, I hope they'll be good!"

"So do I," Hiatt said, smiling. "Well, you two better be on your way and get something to eat. It's getting late."

TOBY and BILL said good night and then left the studio. As the door swung behind them Bill caught Toby's arm under his own. He looked down at her, grinning.

"So," he said, "my young friend is on the threshold of fame and fortune! Going to be a model. Going to have your picture on magazine covers and bill boards from Maine to California. Going to make a lot of money! That calls for a celebration, Toby. A regular, bang-up—"

She stopped him. "Oh, but I'm not, Bill. I mean this was just a sort of try-out. If the pictures are good, maybe I'll have a chance."

"The pictures," he told her, "are going to be knock-outs. Didn't I see them being made? Yes, Miss Ryan, tonight we celebrate."

The elevator halted and they stepped inside. A moment later they were making their way through the lobby to the street. Bill went through the motions of adjusting a monocle. He said, with an exaggerated accent, "Beastly nuisance, but, do you know, I neglected to bring the town car this afternoon. Silly whim of mine, walking—"

Toby grinned. "I have the same whim myself," she said. "Come on."

They set off down the street. Half way to the corner they passed a florist's shop, the brightly lighted window gay with spring flowers. Toby gave a little cry. "Oh—," she said, "aren't they lovely?"

There were tulips and daffodils and pink and blue hyacinths in the window. There were nosegays of purple violets, each neatly circled by green leaves. And in the very center, snow-white and velvety, was a corsage of gardenias tied with a silver ribbon.

Bill hesitated but an instant. Then, pushing her gently before him, he said, "We're going in here."

"Why, yes—of course."

"They were inside the shop then, breathing the heavy odors of a dozen different flowers. Bill said to the middle-aged, spectacled man who came forward, "Gardenias for the young lady?"

"The salesman nodded. "We have some very nice ones," he said. "Something at about a dollar each?"

IMPATIENTLY, Bill pointed to the corsage in the window. "No," he said. "We want that one. It's for sale, isn't it?"

The salesman produced the corsage and Toby stretched it to her shoulder. Turning from the mirror she said, "Oh, Bill, they're beautiful! They're the loveliest flowers in the world."

"They should be. Didn't I tell you we were going to celebrate?"

He handed the salesman a bill and a moment later received the change.

Out in the night once more, Toby said, "Bill, I've never had such lovely flowers. Never! But I shouldn't have let you spend all that money. We're going back to our old cafeteria—"

Bill looked up from the nickels and dimes in his hand. "What?" he said. "Go to that cheap, ordinary place on a night like this? Hardly!" Then he grinned. "I'll tell you what, though," he said, slipping her arm in his once more. "There's another one up the street that isn't so bad!"

They dined at the cafeteria up the street. Over the day's "special"—pot roast, cabbage salad, hot rolls and coffee for 65 cents—Toby told the whole story: Why she had left Bergman's; how she had gone hunting for a job and met Hiatt and how he had sent her to the Models' League; how she had gone from there to Hiatt's studio.

Bill was indignant when he heard what had happened at the store. "But someone must have planned that," he said. "They must have done it deliberately."

"I know. But what can I do about it?"

"You ought to be able to do something. Believe me—"

"I can't, Bill. Even if I knew who did it—I knew for sure—I couldn't force them to take me back."

"No, I suppose not."

She went on, telling him about the Models' League and her talk with Ben Blake. Bill listened, smoking thoughtfully. She explained how all her hopes of becoming a professional model depended on the pictures Hiatt had made that afternoon, and they discussed this, too.

It was late when they left the cafeteria. Toby ruled out Bill's suggestion of a movie and they rode uptown on the subway. Bill's mood of gaiety had returned. It seemed to vanish, however, as they walked the blocks between Toby's rooming house and the subway station. A dozen steps from the door he said, "Toby, I want to say to you. I hope you'll understand."

The girl looked up quickly. She said, "Why, of course—," and wondered why he did not go on.

A Vesper Song

The clouds of sunset fold on fold
Are purple and tawny and edged with gold,
Soft as the silence after hymn
Is the hush that falls as the light grows dim.
And the phantom feet of the shadows glide
To the maple tops and the river's tide,
Not even the thought of a sound is heard
Till the dusk is thrilled by a hidden bird
That suddenly sings as the light grows dim
Its wonderful passionate vesper hymn.
There are in the world where God is king
Some that have nothing to do—but sing,
Though it may be low under waves of pain
They find the pearl of purest strain.
Only this—it was surely best,
Since it taught them strains so full of rest.
And showed the path to a lighted ark
Perhaps to someone lost in the dark.

business meeting the president read a letter written by Miss Daisy Dorothy Heard, state corresponding secretary. The program opened with "The Life of George Washington" by Miss Daisy Dorothy Heard. Miss Marion Smith read a paper on "How the Constitution Was Made" followed by a poem on Lee read by Miss Margery Waddle. The origin of "The Star Spangled Banner" was given by Miss Sara Ann Holland. Three prospective members were presented, Misses Nancy Cox, Marjane Richards and Rosemary Rhodes. The hostesses served sandwiches and tea.

Mesdames A. L. Black, Frank R. Johnson and Miss Hattie Anne Field were hostesses to John Cain chapter D. A. R. at the regular monthly meeting of that organization held in the private dining room of the Hotel Barlow. The large round dining table was centered with a handsome silver basket of snapdragons, freesias and ferns. Dainty butterfly place cards furthered the spring motif. Special guests for the occasion included Mrs. W. T. Woodruff, Pine Bluff, Mrs. Chas. C. Spragins and Mrs. Fred Harrison of this city.

The meeting opened with the salute to the flag, the American Creed and the opening ritual of the D. A. R. The regent, Miss Mamie Twitcheil, presided over the business session. Mrs. Geo. S. Spragins, secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting, the chapter report of the year's activities which had been given at the State Conference in El Dorado, March 11 and 12, and a letter from Miss Seona Dill of Nashville, who received the Good Citizenship Award for Arkansas and will make the pilgrimage to the National Congress D. A. R. in Washington, D. C., about the middle of April. While in Washington, Miss Dill will participate in a drawing which will determine the girl in the United States who will be accorded the honor of being the best citizen among the thousands of girl high school seniors.

Reports of the State Conference were made by Mrs. J. J. Battle, Mrs. Chas. Locke and Miss Mamie Twitcheil. Patriotic education and good citizenship were stressed at the conference and will be a major objective of National and local organizations during the year. Plans were made to augment the financial resources of the local chapter and to further the educational program of which it is a participant.

Mrs. W. T. Woodruff, state filing and lending chairman, stated that three papers which had been read before the local chapter, had been sent to Washington for approval and acceptance. In case, they were passed upon favorably, copies will be made and they will be available for use in other chapters throughout the country. A most interesting and illuminating program on "National Defense" was presented by Mrs. Chas. Locke.

She told of how the United States rated as a military power with that of other nations of the world and stated that we had practiced disarmament and observed our treaties while other countries had not kept faith, with the result that we now found our army and navy, our air forces and national guard units sadly depleted.

Mrs. Wilbur Jones was presented in a beautiful piano solo and then read a splendidly prepared paper which further developed the subject under discussion. The Daughters of the American Revolution is not a military organization, but they stand for adequate preparedness and insist that a skeletonized national defense invites rather than repels peaceful enterprise.

Mesdames Chas. Locke, Wilbur Jones, Lee Holt and Miss Mary Catts will be hostesses for the April meeting, at which time Mrs. Holt will lead a program on "Boston and Vicinity." The meeting adjourned with the closing ritual.

Mrs. T. R. King is the guest of relatives and friends in Kansas City. Miss Jean Nuremberg of Little Rock, who succeeded Mrs. Flora Cotton Slater as Hempstead county health officer at the next three months is domiciled at Hotel Henry.

The Sunshine class of the First Baptist Sunday school, Mrs. Fisk teacher, held its regular monthly business and social meeting Thursday night with Miss Rosemary Rhodes as hostess at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. F. S. Huntley. Seven members were present and following the business period, the hostess served delicious refreshments.

Among the many beautiful parties that have been given honoring Miss Geneva Higginson and Rufus Howard Jr., whose wedding is announced for Friday evening at the First Baptist Church, was the rehearsal dinner given Thursday evening by Mrs. Thos. Kinser, Miss Margaret Kinser and Mrs. J. F. Porterfield at the Kinser home on South Main street. A brilliant color scheme of spring was used throughout the rooms, with quantities of jonquills, bridal wreath, narcissi gracefully arranged and placed at every point of vantage. The bridal party was seated at one large lace covered table, perfectly appointed with pink and blue service in accord with the huge blue bowl of pink snapdragons and sweet peas, surrounded by smaller bowls filled with candy flowers of the chosen color, notes, serving as central adornment. Other guests, including those who had entertained for the honorees, were seated at five small tables, centered with small bowls of lovely white flowers and ferns. Out of town guests for this very delightful occasion were Miss Toland of Arkadelphia and Miss Claudia Mann of Malvern.

C. A. Barnes has returned to Hope after spending several months in Mississippi and Alabama.

Contrast is the keynote of the successful fish dinner—contrast in color, texture and taste.

A tart sauce for the fish improves the flavor and the fish itself determines whether the sauce shall or shall not be rich with butter. The varieties of fish we term lean fish need more seasoning in their cooking, too. The richly flavored varieties need comparatively little fat and seasoning.

You prepare a planked fish dinner much as you do a planked steak. Add two or three vegetables in addition to the border and there's your dinner all on the plank.

Heat your plank, which has been oiled, in a hot oven (400 degrees F.), for ten minutes. Arrange the fish on it and if you are cooking a lean fish

Tomorrow's Menu
Breakfast: Pineapple juice, cereal cooked with raisins, cream, toast, milk, coffee.
Luncheon: Rice and ham loaf with creamed peppers, hearts of celery, canned peaches, coconut cake, milk, tea.
Dinner: Planked bluefish with broiled tomatoes, buttered green beans and border of mashed potatoes, cress and apple salad, prune whip, milk, coffee.

like bluefish brush with melted lemon butter. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for thirty to forty minutes, depending on the thickness of the fish.

While the fish is cooking prepare mashed potatoes and the other vegetables, broiled tomatoes, perhaps.

Broiled Tomatoes
Peel tomatoes and cut in halves crosswise. Cut a thin slice from rounding and of each half. Dip in melted butter, sprinkle with salt, pepper and a few grains of sugar and dip in egg lightly beaten and then again in crumbs. Put in a well oiled broiler and broil six to eight minutes.
You can use sweet potatoes to make a border instead of the usual Irish potatoes if you like—more colorful, too. Boil just as you would white potatoes, then put through a ricer to make very smooth. Season well with salt, pepper and butter, then beat in this cream to make very light and fluffy.

Planking is one of the most unusual and most attractive ways to serve fish. Whole fish with fairly thick flesh may be planked whole or split and laid flat. Steaks and fillets are extra good planked.

A salad of cress and apple goes well with fish. Choose a crisp tart apple and cut in eights after paring. Remove core and drop into lemon juice. Let stand in the refrigerator for an hour or longer to chill thoroughly. When ready to serve, arrange on a bed of crisp cool cress and sprinkle with grated cheese. Serve with French dressing.

For dessert how about old-fashioned prune whip?
Prune Whip
One-third pound prunes, ½ cup

McGuirk Wins Over Carr at Fair Park

World's Wrestling Champion Gives Local Fans a Good Show

LeRoy McGuirk, world's light heavyweight wrestling champion, gave some 250 fans an exhibition of scientific wrestling Thursday night before he straddled Charley Carr with a "back breaker" to win the feature event at Fair Park arena.

Carr was helped from the ring and was unable to return because of an injury to his back, suffered when McGuirk clamped on the hold. Although the bout only lasted about 30 minutes, McGuirk and Carr put on a show that was well worth the fan's time and money.

Walter Miller took two straight falls over Billy Venable to win the 45-minute semi-final event. The bout lasted 40 minutes.

Miller and Venable gave the fans a good show in a rough performance.

NEWS CHURCHES

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Sunday School 9:45 a. m. We have classes for all ages. We extend a cordial invitation to all ages to come and worship with us.
Communion service at 11 a. m.
Christian Endeavor Meeting at 6:45 Every one welcome.

HOPE GOSPEL TABERNACLE

Bert Webb, Pastor

A special "Homecoming Day" is to be observed in the Junior and Intermediate departments at the Tabernacle Sunday School next Sunday. All children who have ever attended this Sunday School are urged to plan to be present for this special time of reunion. Classes for all ages with competent, Godly teachers in charge make this one of the best Sunday Schools in the city; you will profit by attending at 9:45 Sunday morning.

Immediately following the Sunday School the 11 o'clock worship hour begins, at which time the pastor will speak on "How to Worship" and in the evening evangelistic service will begin promptly at 7:30. Rev. Webb will have his subject, "Mormonism and Its Cure." Spend an enjoyable hour at the Tabernacle on Sunday evening; it is Hope's Full Gospel Center.

Children's Church and Christ's Ambassadors meet at 6:30 p. m.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

Gilbert Copeland, Minister

Services for Lord's Day are as follows: Bible classes 10 a. m. Preaching at 11 a. m. "Corrections of the Church at Corinth" will be the study. The City of Corinth in the days of Paul remind us of some of our modern cities. Come and let study the comparison. Young peoples' meeting at 7:30 p. m. We are studying "The Holy Spirit and Its Work." Are you troubled over this subject? There is no reason for it. We are inviting every one to come and listen to this subject.

sugar, whites five eggs, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, few grains salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Pick over and wash prunes. Soak and stew as usual. There should be not more than ¼ cup stewed and pitted prunes. Rub prunes through a colander, add sugar and cook five minutes. The mixture should be thick as marmalade. Let cool. Beat whites of eggs until stiff, beating in a few grains of salt. Gradually beat in prune mixture and lemon juice and vanilla. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake thirty minutes in a slow oven (300 degrees F.). Serve cold with soft custard made with the yolks of eggs or with whipped cream.

JESUS TEACHES TRUE VALUES.

Text: Luke 12:22-34
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 22

Religious essentially is a matter of values. The same thing might be said of life, for the real worth of a man's life depends upon the things in which he invests it.

Significance of Jesus as Teacher and Savior was in the things to which He attached supreme importance. He saw men in His day concerned about wealth, and He told them the story of the man whose lands brought forth abundantly and whose barns were insufficient to contain all his crop.

It looked as if this man had all that life could desire, and he felt satisfied with himself and with his possessions. But that night he died, and of what worth were these things.

How simple and yet how pointed Jesus made this story of the fleeting and inadequate nature of earthly possessions!

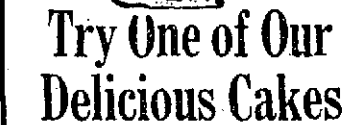

Again, Jesus saw men deeply concerned about keeping alive, about food and about the body. It seemed a very important thing, and yet Jesus reminded them that there is something more important than that. What is the use of keeping the body alive, if one's life is of no value whatever?

So Jesus taught men that there is an inner independence of life upon God that is more important than anxiety about food and clothing.

We must not misunderstand these words of Jesus. We cannot think of Him as suggesting that it is unimportant that men should have food and clothing. As a matter of fact, He always laid great stress upon the fact that those who have these things should share them with their less fortunate fellows.

May it not be that Jesus was seeking to teach that problems of food and clothing will never be properly solved until men approach them from the standpoint of life's higher values? Is it not that which we are seeing in our modern world, where our economic system is based upon the discussed. Preaching at 7:30 p. m. Subject, "Things that Hinder." We welcome you to these services.

omic life, with all its vast machinery and its material aims and interests has broken down and millions of people have been on the verge of starvation or dependent almost entirely upon public relief?

Jesus brought into life an entirely new scale of values. He said that if our minds were set upon higher things, that if we were first of all seeking His Kingdom and His righteousness other things would be comparatively easy of solution.

He urged that we should make a larger investment in our fellow men, that we should use the things that we have, not for ourselves, but in ways in which they would bring to us largeness of life and blessing.

Life in all the centuries since Jesus uttered these words has been a commentary upon them. Would that men could read that commentary of human experience with more intelligence and give heed to the Master!

Mack Is Baseball's "Major Bowes;" Amateurs Crowd Camp

Veteran Pilot Once More Looks to Recruits to Rebuild a Famous Diamond Club

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another of a series on big league training camps.

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

FORT MYERS, Fla.—Connie Mack was called to the stage during the performance of a Major Bowes unite here. "Philadelphia writers are trying to drive me out of baseball," said the venerable manager of the Athletics.

The actors and present members of Mack's club cheered. Amateurs must stick together. The 52 players assembled here comprise the big leagues' original Ma) Bowes club.

There are a few more wrinkles in the aging face of the 73-year-old pilot of the A's than there were when I talked over the situation with him last year. Some of them were put there by sports writers who accused him of deliberately losing games last year, and selling the cream of his crop of stars just when he needed them most.

But there's a bright spot in Mack's picture, made plenty blue by the storm of abuse from scribes and fans that arose when his team finished last in 1935.

Paradoxical as it seems, there is a distinct advantage in finishing last. The league format gets first pick in the draft, and it is by this means that

Pointer Dog Helps This Newsboy Out

Joe Takes It Easy While "Dinah" Carries the Papers

PROSPECT, Va.—(AP)—With Dinah, an 18-month-old pointer to help him, Newsboy Joe Alsop has an easy job.

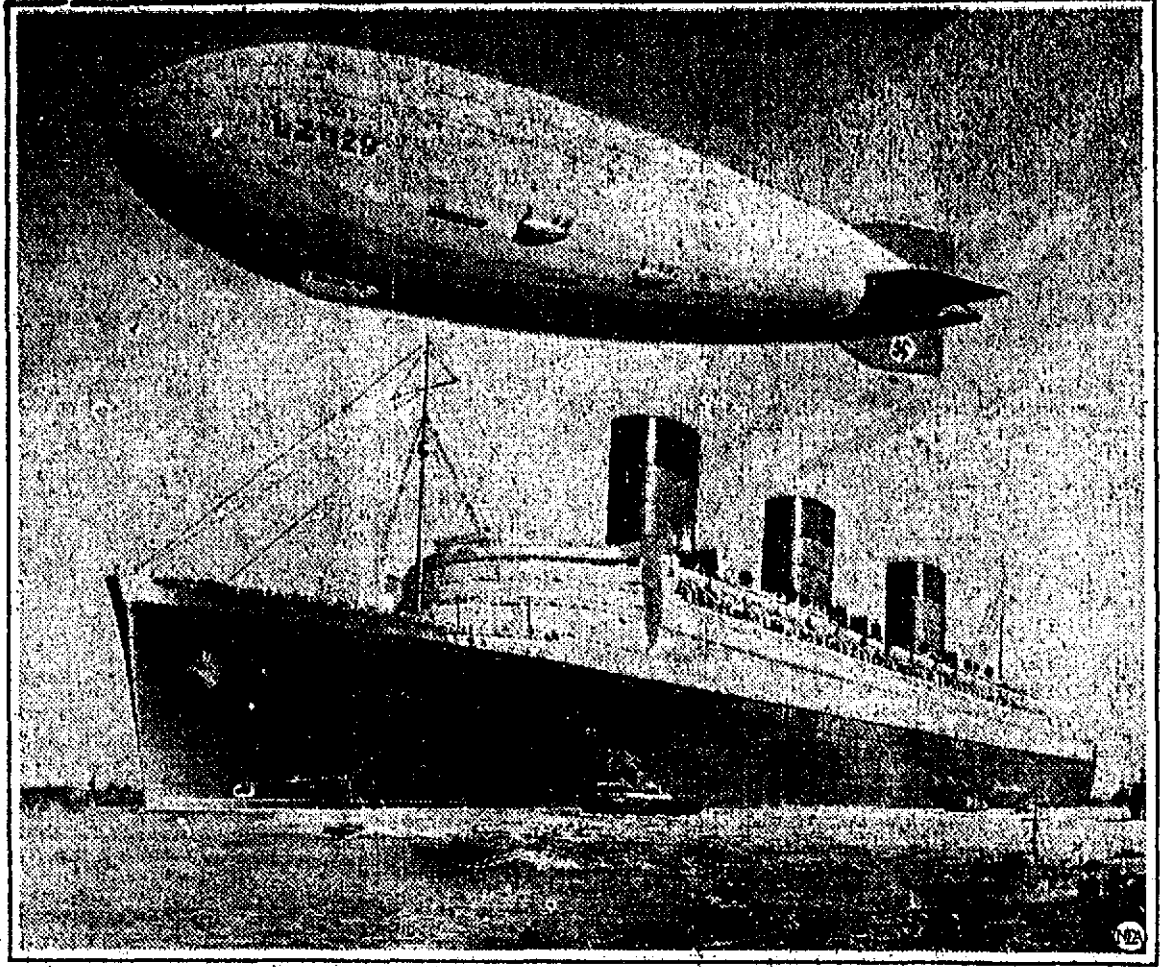

Dinah rides the running boards of Alsop's motor car, leaping off to deliver the folded newspapers on the porches of subscribers. It took her master, a high school senior, a year to train her.

If the pointer encounters a member of a subscriber's family who wishes to take the newspaper from her, Dinah looks toward her master for instructions.

The job of delivering papers calls for speed. Dinah will not tarry to frolic with canine friends.

She takes her job as seriously, her master said, as that of "standing" a covey of quail. Devoted to hunting as a good pointer should be, Dinah has retrieved her quota of partridges from central Virginia's broom sage and thickets.

A new giant of the air and a new giant of the seas will make transportation history this spring, when Germany's mammoth Zeppelin, the LZ-129, to be known as the Von Hindenburg, first crosses the North Atlantic from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst, N. J., and the Queen Mary, England's superliner, speeds on her maiden voyage across the Atlantic from Southampton to New York. A striking idea of the immensity of the monarch of the air and the queen of the seas and their comparative sizes is given in the composite picture above.

do most of the catching, although something is expected of George Savino, who hit .273 for Syracuse last term.

Rabbit Warbler tried his best to escape from Philadelphia, but will be back at second base.

Higgins Won't Weaken

Holdout Higgins is expected to be sold to the Yankees or elsewhere before the season gets under way. Those who know Pinkey declare that he will get what he wants or quit. He conducts a successful insurance business in Dallas.

Unless the recalcitrant one shows up, Mack simply will have to reach into a hat and draw slips for the left side of his infield. The candidates are Lamar Newsome, who was very erratic last season; Al Niese, who hit .273 for Syracuse; Russell Peters, who hit all of .212 for Albany; Jack Pearson, a semi-pro; and Jerome Yarter, who hit .240 for Galveston.

The outfield will do, with Bob Johnson in center and Wally Moses and the drafties, Puccinelli and Mailho, Puccinelli swatted .359 for Baltimore, and Mailho, .353 for Oakland. Of course, there will be Finney, too, in the event Oglesby makes the grade at first.

Connie Mack has introduced many baseball innovations. Now he becomes the first to try to get through a big league season with only an outfield. He may not succeed, but one thing is certain—it won't cost him much.

NEXT: The Yankees.

New Court Test Is Foreseen for TVA

Power Company's Stockholders Once More Take Federal Appeal

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—TVA's "yardstick" power program headed Thursday toward another test before the Supreme Court.

Forney Johnston, lawyer for Alabama Power Company preferred stockholders, attacking legality of the program, announced that an appeal would be taken from the ruling of Federal Judge David J. Davis here today declining to accept an amended bill of complaint.

The amended bill was designed to bring up phases of the TVA program, which, Johnston contended, the Supreme Court did not consider in its ruling on February 17.

the treaty violated the Locarno agreement and thus gave Germany the right to remilitarize the Rhineland.

British quarters said that if this plan were carried out, France had agreed to withdraw her demand for evacuation of German troops in the Rhineland.

The international conference would consider all security proposals, together with limitation of armaments, economic questions and raw materials, in an attempt once and for all to repair weaknesses of the Versailles treaty and restore security.

Any new peace treaty would be incorporated within the framework of the League covenant.

Germany Rejects It

BERLIN, Germany—(AP)—The Foreign Office, centering bitter comment once more on the Franco-Soviet Military pact, rejected as "unacceptable" Thursday night the reported Locarno proposal to adjust German violation of the mutual security treaty.

A Foreign Office spokesman expressed surprise at the unanimous vote by the League of Nations Council in condemning Germany as a Locarno violator and declared the Nazi nation would "accept nothing less than parity, meaning a two-sided demilitarized zone" during Rhineland negotiations.

Harve Thorn Grants Clemency to Convicts

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Acting Governor Harve B. Thorn commuted the death sentence of Andrew Healey, a negro slayer, Thursday to life imprisonment and reduced the life term of another convict to six years.

Five other clemency orders were issued by the acting governor during his second day in office. He said he planned to return Thursday night to his home at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and that Governor Futrell, who has been touring in Louisiana, would be back in the office Friday.

Younger Women Like This Easy Laxative

There's no need to dread a laxative if it's pleasant, soothing, and gentle. Take Fenn-a-Mint, the delightful chewing gum laxative. As soon as you start to chew it, its stomach-settling mint brings a clean, fresh taste to the mouth. And Fenn-a-Mint acts gently. For as you chew out the laxative ingredient which is absolutely tasteless, the flow of digestive juices is increased. The laxative is mixed with them and carried into the system. It passes through the stomach without upset and into the bowels scientifically, so that your action is wonderfully easy and thorough. Try the pleasant, refreshing Fenn-a-Mint way. Doctors prescribe its laxative ingredient for both children and adults. It is non-habit-forming. Sold on a money-back guarantee. Usurious family also package 15c and 25c.
